

NEW IPEX Acquisition Expands Product Portfolio and Client Base

In April 2015, IPEX acquired the assets of NACO Industries, a leading American manufacturer of standard and custom fabricated PVC and CPVC fittings.

Founded in 1976, NACO has four manufacturing centers and nine distribution centers across the United States. The company's fittings, and low pressure valves service municipal markets as well as agricultural, irrigation, and industrial markets. NACO has earned a superior reputation for personalized customer service and quick regional response.

"Like IPEX, NACO is dedicated to providing exceptional service, and their broad offering of quality fittings is impressive", says Alex Mestres, Chairman and CEO of IPEX. "I am passionate about exceeding customers' expectations and this acquisition combines product and service opportunities that will immensely benefit our collective customers."

Michael Hopkins, owner of NACO echoes the excitement, "I am delighted by this acquisition and thrilled to see it come together. Both IPEX and NACO are long standing, highly regarded companies. The synergies between our two companies will provide our customers and the market as a whole with a broader product offering and increased focus on customer service. I cannot imagine a better fit."

The acquisition expands both IPEX's product list and its client base and adds the respected NACO brand to the company's portfolio.